Life Shifts as Campus Community Responds to COVID-19

Life is a little different today at Cal State Fullerton.

Faculty are teaching via Zoom while Information Technology staff are busy working to assist the campus community with computers and access to their everyday work files. And students are learning how to succeed in virtual classrooms and cope with the uncertainty of a worldwide pandemic.

SPEECH AND HEARING CLINIC TRAINS STUDENTS, REACHES OUT TO COMMUNITY

Since 1961, the Cal State Fullerton Speech and Hearing Clinic has provided clinical services to individuals with communication disorders and needs. The clinic also serves as an important part of the clinical training program for students working toward earning a bachelor's or master's degree in communication disorders. Under the direct supervision of licensed, certified speech-language pathologists and audiologists, students learn the skills required for careers in the field.

As of January 2018, the clinic now relies on voluntary donations made by clients and community members. This allows the clinic to extend its reach into the community. Donations support the training of graduate clinicians and the services provided to the community.

If you are interested in receiving an assessment and/or speech-language therapy, call the Speech and Hearing Clinic at 657-278-3997 or email speechclinic@fullerton.edu.

TITANS GIVE GENEROUSLY ON UNIVERSITY'S FIRST DAY OF GIVING

Hundreds of Titans across the globe rallied together March 12 to make #TitansGive, Cal State Fullerton's first-ever day of giving, an unqualified success.

The day raised $239,139 in support of student success at CSUF. The 24-hour donation marathon included a wide array of giving challenges and sponsored matches, made possible by supporters of the university.

"We are so humbled and grateful for the generosity of our Titan family," said Greg Saks, vice president for university advancement. "Even amid uncertainty, Titans continue to think of others and support the success of our campus community."

CAL STATE FULLERTON RECEIVES FULL, MAXIMUM 10-YEAR ACCREDITATION WSCUC ACCREDITATION AFFIRMS THAT UNIVERSITY MEETS HIGH STANDARDS

Cal State Fullerton was recently notified by the WASC Senior College and University Commission (WSCUC) that it will receive a full and maximum 10-year accreditation after a rigorous review process that required deep campus engagement in multiple phases. Why does accreditation matter? There are a number of reasons including:

- Certification, validation and recognition by peers
- Student and parents' confidence in the institution
- Student ability to transfer credits
- Competitiveness in grant applications
- Eligibility for federal financing options (e.g., financial aid)

"I want to thank and recognize our amazing faculty, staff and students," said President Fram Virjee in an email to the campus. "One of the WSCUC senior leaders informed us that only a very small percentage of the institutions they review earn the full, maximum 10-year accreditation — putting CSUF in exceptional territory," he added.

TITANS of Giving

BOB AND TERRI NICCUM

Bob '68, '84 (B.A. psychology, MBA) and Terri '73, '84 (B.A. English, M.A. communications) made a gift last year to endow The Bob & Terri Niccum New Music Scholarship in the School of Music. The Niccums established the scholarship to provide annual support for an undergraduate or graduate student who is a music major participating in the New Music Ensemble. The Niccums met on campus 50 years ago. In honor of their milestone anniversary, they decided to create the scholarship.
